Mascara made just for your brows

Posted Monday, February 08, 2010

If you've ever been tempted to use your mascara on your eyebrows, you're not alone. If it wasn't for the super-dark shade of most mascaras, it would be a great way to add control and color to those two appearance-influencing strips of hair.

That's why we're psyched over Brow Diva Brow Mascara. First and foremost, it doesn't come in true black, because no matter how dark your hair may be, jet black brows just don't look good on anyone. Instead, your options include blonde (a soft, warm blond-tan tint), brunette (a medium brown), redhead (a not-too-bright, orange-undertone red), and dark brown/black (a rich dark brown).

No matter which shade you choose—and you should choose based on your current hair color—Brow Mascara covers grays and adds faux fullness to sparse brows. You're left with a shape that stays the way you want, in a color that flatters your face.
